ters for Auckland, and J. W. Seaver for San Francisco. The reports from the whaling fleet in the Arctic, as brought by the vessels so far at hand, seem to indicate that the season's catch will average considerably lower than that of last year. It is quite possible, however, that the last ships to leave the ground may obtain some good cuts.

In port of Coquimbo—U S flagship Pensacola, from Caliao. Expected in Valparaiso—U S ship-of-war Richmond, from the Straits of Magellan. REPORT OF SCHOONER C. M. WARD, RICKMAN, MASTER

-Left Honolulu Aug 25th at 10 a M, with a light breeze from the eastward, and at 2 r is had a calm, heavy sea running At midnight a light wind sprung up from the castward, which carried us to lat 10° N, long 156° W; then took the wind light from the SE. Arrived at Jarvis Island Sept 5th, too late to take the moorings, but succeeded in doing so the next day Left Jarvis for Enderbury Sept 8th, wind light from the 8E. Had light airs and calms from the former to the latter island. accompanied by thunder, lightning and heavy rains. Arrived at Enderbury Island Sept 19th, weather calm, whalebeats being dispatched to tow us immediately to the moorings. While lying there, had heavy rains, accompanied by lightning. Left Enderbury for Baker's on the 22d, having light airs from enstward. Sighted latter island at 1 P M on the 20th, weather calm; next day had light airs from northward. Made fast to the moorings on the 27th, wind light from NE. Left Baker's for Howland's Island a st of the 28th, wind fresh from NE veering to SE, and arrived there at 4 P M same day. Left Howland's Island for Honolulu Sept 29th, wind light from castward. Through the night had a calm, which lasted for four days. A light breeze then spring up from eastward. Rest of passage had light airs and baffling winds. Made Oahn at 6 r at Oct 25th, and came into port same day.

—While becalmed two days to windward of Baker's Island, saw large quantities of sperm whales. A great many have also been seen from Baker's Island the past month. On the 22d and 23d Aug 2 large schools were seen from Jarvis Island.

REPORT OF BARK OCEAN STEED, H. PEASE, JR., MANTER. -Left Honolulu June 14th; had light pleasant weather to Fox Islands. Passed through the 170 passage July 4th without seeing the land, weather thick and foggy until the 18th, when we made Cape Lisburn, the first land sighted since leaving the Sandwich Islands. On the 25th anchored off Point Beicher; during twenty-four hours a fresh gale sprung up from WSW, which parted both our cables; lost both anchors with 90 fathoms chain. Passed to the eastward of Point Barrow on the 27th in company with twenty ships. Found a space of clear water between the shore and main pack of an average width of seven miles. A number of the ships worked as far east as the meridian of 150°, but saw nothing in way of whating that would excourage them to take the risk and co. of whaling that would encourage them to take the risk and go further. (Have every reason to believe that the ships could have advanced as far as Mackenzie River, but to have returned the same senson doubtful.) But very few whales were seen, and those going quick. About half the number of ships succeeded in capturing from one to two each. Aug 8th a bad spell of weather came on, and while working back to Point Harraw to get a safe position, we lost our jib-boom, jibs, and all gear attacked. On the 20th left for Herald Island. Cruised from there to 165°; had bad weather with much snow. Saw very few whales, and only for one rising. Sept 25th experienced a strong gale from NE, which lasted until Oct 2d. Famed through Behring Straits Oct 4th; on the 8th saw a schooner underway close in the south side of St George Island. Passed through the 170 passage of Fex Islands on the 10th. From thence to lat 30° N had strong S and SW winds, with much rain; took the trade in lat 24° N. Sighted Diamond Head at 6 r st Oct 30th, arriving in Honolulu next morning.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1. WE learned yesterday that a reply had been received from the Cabinet to the memorial of the Agents of Fire Insurance Companies, relative to the water supply. The nature of the reply has not transpired, and we are informed that the cor- | with barrenness and desolation would again become respondence is not yet closed.

We were not a little surprised at the fire of the night of Oct. 19th to observe what we pronounce as a most serious defect in either the hydrants or is not sure about it. And he is not certain whether the couplings of the hose belonging to the Fire Department. We allude to the difficulty in attaching the hose to the hydrants, owing to the he is going to do. He says he is going to grub up some of His Majesty's largest trees because they do came away after being attached, and two of the Hose Company's men were actually detailed to hold their hose down to the hydrant! This is a strange state of things, and ought to be remedied at once. And we remark also that our hydrants are stupidly placed on a level with the street, and are evidently imperceptible to the eyes of firemen, instead of standing several feet high, as in other

The Steam tug Pele is a very useful institution, an absolute necessity to our port, but we have heard the remark more than once made that it was run on extremely independent principles, and with a bee-line attachment to red-tape. When the Murray was known for several hours last Tuesday week to be lying becalmed off Diamond Head, it was thought that the Pele should have steamed up and gone out to the relief of the forty passengers anxious, after a long voyage, to get into port; and when the dismasted wheat ship was compelled to anchor outside over night with a fresh breeze on shore, people then wondered why the tug had not brought her inside beyond the possible danger of a southerly gale and a lee shore. But then these critics apparently forgot that the Pele is a government tug, that there is no opposition in her line, and that it is not fashionable for governments to be either enterprising or

THE REPORTS which come to hand by the first arrivals from the Arctic whaling fleet are indeed discouraging to all who have hoped that the present season would make amends for the last. The New Bedford Shipping List of September 2d thus despondingly speaks of the whaling business generally : The steady decline of the whale fishery goes on without change. Even in the hyperborean regions of the Arctic and Antarctic seas, to which whalers have now to resort, the fishery is becoming gradually of less value and importance. The Greenland fishery for a good many years was a profitable field for whalers, but even that is now giving out. The fleet of whalers last year fitted out in Scotland for the Greenland seas numbered only ten vessels, and down although the fishery usually closes by July 1st. This looks as if the Scotch, notwithstanding their indomitable perseverance, would be tempted to abandon this almost fruitless pursuit.

Some prople have an original way of drawing deductions. For instance, the Gazette of last week, in view of the result of the civil suit for eight thousand dollars against the estate of the late King, concludes that "the Sovereign is amenable to the law for any trespass on private rights or property." Not while he lives, we should say, (and it does not matter much to him after death) in view of the 40th Article of the Consti-

"The King cannot be sued or held to account in any Court or tribunal of the Realm. The civil suit in question, according to the Gazette also settles the point that "the awards of the Land Commission constitute the basis of our land tenure." We beg to ask, whoever dreamed of any other basis for land tenures in this kingdom than the awards of that Commission? It would be singular, indeed, that this had been left all these years an open issue, to be "settled" now by a jury trial about salt! And if this could be, might not a subsequent jury unsettle the "issue?" As the Gazette treated its subscribers to a full dose of salt last Wednesday week, we shall not repeat it, believing too much physic is worse than not enough.

THE Alta of October 6th, criticises the policy of the American Government in refusing to take the Fiji Islands when they were offered some years ago, and says that the United States has a theory, or something else, which forbids the acceptance of foreign territory unless they buy it or take it by force. It concludes that "if King Lunalilo would only put a decent price upon the harbor he offers us for nothing, we should most certainly buy it. But take it without price? never. There could be no stealings in that transaction, and so we will have none of it. Uncle Sam disdains gifts."

THE LAW of 1860, commonly known as "The Act to Mitigate," while it still remains in full on the statute book, has been inoperative for more than a year past and is practically a dead letter. Its operation was "suspended" by the Ministry during the late reign, for reasons which were not those of public policy or economy, but of a purely private nature. The suspension of a law, under the circumstances, was an arbitrary act of a Minister, entirely unauthorized and illegal; but such proceedings in those days created no great degree of surprise. Besides, the law in question was obnoxious to the prejudices of many abstractionists who look no farther than the surface of things, and who were pleased to see it overthrown, by no matter what means. With the coming in of the new administration however, at the beginning of the present reign, it was expected that this law, as well as others, would be again put in operation, as there existed no legal reason why it should remain suspended. The report was current several months ago that the necessary steps were about to be taken for its COMMISSION MERCHANT AND DEALER IN General Merchandise. re-enforcement; but nothing has been done and the law still sleeps, while the evils and diseases FOR SAN PRANCISCO—Per D. C. Murray, Oct. 25th—E are suffered to flourish and grow ranker than from Kealakekua Bay, wis, Capt Lambert, wife and child, Wm Keveney Mr Filler fact, as medical men will testify. And the melancholy and alarming truth is, that the majority of the cases of disease that are known and presented to the hospital and to physicians for treatment are very young females, often mere children. The diseases arising from prostitution are far more widespread and destructive among the common people than the small-pox or any other | Choicest Meats from the Finest Herds epidemic ever could be. Secretly and insidiously the curse is eating out the life of the people, and absolutely nothing is being done to save them from it. The amount of good accomplished, including the lives saved, by the law in question while it was in operation, can never be estimated or stated in figures. It was the one measurethis "law to mitigate"-which struck at the will certainly be proclaimed on the proposal of it | root of the evil, while all the other remedies of moral or religious influences and fines and imprisonments failed of accomplishing the desired end. Admitting that the law is a somewhat ists. M. Thiers, Dufaure, Lay and Peries hold a conference next week. All sections of the Left are united, the Extremists promising to submit to the guidance of the Moderates. The Republican journals are of the Moderates. The Republican journals are objections, it was infinitely better than no law at all on the subject. Properly executed, it was a most powerful agent in staying the diminution of the race; with its suspension, sterility has in-

The Man with the New Hoc.

Mr. Entron:-Do you know a fellow by the name of Jacques Bogundus? I guess not. He has recently arrived at these far off parts from the metropolis, and is full of talk about matters and things in the city. He says that the streams in Nuuanu valley are drying up, and that people are talking about boring an artesian well. But Jacques is afraid that they might bore too deep and get into Pele's domain; and then the water would be bot. He considers it a far safer and better plan to restore the forests around the head of the valley, so the hills branded no longer as of old the even collectors and dispensers of water to the thirsty town. He tells also about a man there with a new hoe You doubtless have heard of him. On the handle of the hoe is "Gypsum" or some such name, Jacques it is the name of the maker or owner of the hoe, or of some patent fertilizer. The man with the new hoe, though not very stout is full of talk as to what not bear better and more fruit; and if he finds any bad fruit-any apples of Sodom, on His Majesty's smaller trees, he will go at them with his hoe and lop off the bad branches or demolish them entirely Judging from what he says he will do he must be a real Hercules in prowess and might. Bogundus thinks that he is trying to get into the King's confidence in order to become His chief tree planter and gardener; and then he would make the metropolis and the kingdom a Paradise in more respects than one. At any rate Bogundus infers this from his talk? What do you know, Mr. Editor, about the man and his new hoe? Is his talk to be relied upon? Would you advise people who live remote from the metropolis to unite in a petition that he may be appointed chief tree planter to His Majesty? Is his hoe really anything remarkable? If he will accomplish all the good things he promises we should like give him the opportunity. But we are in doubt, for Bogundus tells us that those who know him best, say that he knows and cares little or nothing about trees and gardening, but that he is chiefly devoted to wool gathering, which has become a passion with him, and they think that he wishes the position of His Majesty's chief tree planter for the sake of having better opportunities of indulgence in his favorite oursuit. Bogundus further says that his new hoe is sing its sharpness and polish and is becoming shaky, and jagged on the edge. He thinks that the blade is not made of steel but of hoop iron, and that before long it will have to be made over or thrown away as useless. RUSTICANUS. Maloula, October 25th, 1873.

George Elliot.

The disparaging remarks in the October number of the Friend, concerning an author who is honored and admired in both hemispheres, should not pass un-noticed here, where George Elliot is already a household word and her works studied and cherished by many, as creations of wonderful genius and purity of Delicious Golden Pheasant Tea, I do not know who the unknown critic of the Friend is, but it is safe to say that any one who has read George Elliot's works, who has become acquainted with Romola, and followed the sad steps of Mrs. Duret's Salad Oil! Casaubon in her tried and noble life, without yielding sympathy or recognizing a "true woman," although well read in current literature"-whatever that may mean-has no " insight into human character ' worthy of mention.

Works of fiction, like everything else, must be judged upon their own merit. It is natural for easily prejudiced persons to imagine defects and immoralities of sentiment in books upon hearing something against their authors. Even Byron's sacred hymns would doubtless be thought dangerous by some, simply because he wrote them. But for any ne to discover in George Elliot's works evidences of mmoral tendencies on the part of the author, is impossible. There are some women, however, and men too, probably a great many of both, who are shocked when womanly character of the frank and independent type is drawn with considerable positiveness. Their idea of woman is limited by conventional prejudices that make it impossible for them to appreciate her simply in the light of free and natural womanliness, which is something so akin to manliness as to be worthy of standing with it in the fullest equality. The "oak and vine" theory of the mutual relation of men and women, is still widely held in spite of the fact that the age of gallantry is hidden away behind centuries of improvement, and when a woman of independent thought, self-sustaining and strong in her own might, is sketched, the adherents of this theory, finding her widely different from themselves or their models, easily conclude that she is less nerfect, rather than more.

MR. EDITOR:-The Nuhou in closing its second volume, wherein it has indulged ad libitum in the license to cut antics and "show its shapes," takes leave of the English reading portion of the community with a vicious kick, expressive of the editor's contempt. He declares that he is "tired" of talking to us; he might have ceased his gabble long ago for that matter-it is doubtful if any one would have complained of his silence. But he calls names, in his rage because the public has failed to appreciate his towering genius. We are a "cosmopolitan mob of foreigners," who are quite willing to be governed. Being foreigners in the country, it strikes me as a good trait to be cosmopolitan, and that we don't rebel against the government under which we live can hardly be a reason for denominating us as a "mob." But the Nuhou is going to address itself to the natives, turning its back upon the foreign mob. To the natives then, the editor will doubtless unbosom himself and show "what we are worth in soul," not failing to impress upon them what a wretched bad t goes to make up the foreign mob. What shall we liken this Nuhou genius unto? I am reminded of a verse in Spencer's "Fairy Queen:"

"Now gan his heart all swell in jollity, And of himself great hope and help conceived That, puffed up with smoke of vanity, And with self-loved personage deceivid, He 'gan to hope, of men to be receiv'd For such as him thought, or fain would be But for in court gay portance he perceiv'd A gallant show to be in greatest gree, Eftsoons to court he cast t' advance his first degree." PUBLICOLA.

FOR MATHEMATICIANS .- The Alta has recently been affording occupation to arithmeticians by propounding the multiplication of £19 19s. 113d. by £19 19s. 111d. The problem seems to have bothered correspondents-and has been of great benefit to stationers, inasmuch as many sheets of paper have been covered with figures, and many pencils worn to the stump. Perhaps some of our readers may also think "it is easy enough," and give it a trial.

New York, Sept. 21.—The story of yesterday's panic fills from six to ten columns of each of the morning journals. Commodore Vanderbilt made a proposition that if the President would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to place $30,000,000 of reserve in the banks of the city, he (Vanderbilt) would add $15,000,000 more. President Grant replied that he was anxious to do all in his power to relieve the present financial embarrassment, and to prevent further disasters, but that he must conform to the Constitution.
